

INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF DENTISTS

THE MEANING OF ICD FELLOWSHIP

At its core, the International College of Dentists remains simply an honour society recognising leadership in dental education, research, humanitarian programs or other service that advances the dental profession and oral health around the world.

To be a Fellow of ICD means that you are recognised by your local peers and by dentists internationally as being amongst the 1% of dentists in the world leading advances in dentistry and initiatives that contribute to improving oral health worldwide.

To be a Fellow of ICD means that you have a global vision of what you contribute as a dental professional beyond the boundaries of the local community that you serve.

To be a Fellow of ICD means that you are connected to dental leaders throughout the world who wish to help shape the future of the dental profession and contribute to improving oral health on a global scale.

To be a Fellow of ICD means that you have contributed above and beyond what is expected of you as a dental professional serving your local community.

To be a Fellow of ICD means that you are dedicated to elevating the reputation of the dental profession around the world.

F.I.C.D.

The prestigious title of “Fellow of the International College of Dentists” must be earned and may take years to gain.

The title of “Fellow of the International College of Dentists” is awarded only to those dentists nominated by their peers for the recognition they deserve - peers who know the depth of dedication and leadership demonstrated by the individual.

The title of “Fellow of the International College of Dentists” elevates a dentist’s standing within the dental profession locally and internationally.

The title of “Fellow of the International College of Dentists” elevates a dentist’s standing within the local community and within the global community.